WRITING TASK

Well Written

There are many cultural traits in our society.

These cultural traits are divided into two categories: material and non-material. Material culture traits consist of items that we can touch, such as written language, buildings, and artwork. However, non-material cultural traits consist of things we cannot touch, such as spoken language, customs, and beliefs.

Our society has many different material culture traits. One of these culture traits is buildings. Our society has schools, where children go to learn about things such as Science, Math, Language Arts, and Social Studies. These buildings help children learn and grow.

Another material culture trait is artwork. Artwork is many, many things. The picture forms a story, which gradually builds until the end. Artwork can be different colored dots randomly placed by a Kindergartener, or a masterpiece like Leonardo Da Vinci's "Mona Lisa". Artwork is many things. Different kinds of art help our society learn and grow.

WRITING TASK

One of our main material culture traits is written language. A written language can be from normal letters (A-Z) in America to different symbols in Japan and China. Other languages may have "accents" or, where to put emphasis on. Other languages such as Spanish may have different letters or letter combinations. The double L, (ll) the double R, (rr) and the ch (ch) make up different sounds in Spanish. Learning different languages can help our society learn and grow.

Like material culture traits, our society also has many non-material culture traits. One of these traits is customs. The main customs in our society are Thanksgiving, The Fourth of July, Halloween, Valentine's Day, and New Year's. Christmas is celebrated by Roman Catholics. Although people who study Judaism celebrate a holiday called Hanukkah. Celebrating different holidays is a great way for our society to learn and grow.
